

Examinations

The VHS Dresden offers examinations from level A2 to level C1, which will state your German language skills in accordance with the Common European Framework of Reference for Languages. The above-mentioned examinations are internationally recognised examinations by the telc or the Goethe-Institute.

Our telc-language certificates will improve your chances on the job market, as well as in the field of primary and further education. In addition to this, immigrants applying for German citizenship will be asked to provide evidence of adequate knowledge of the German language. This can be achieved by taking the German language examination for immigrants, which is officially recognized by the respective authorities.

The necessary language skills can be achieved at the Volkshochschule Dresden. Our standard courses, as well as our special training classes, will help you prepare for the examinations.

Please refer to our information centres for upcoming examination dates, current course times, registration periods and conditions.
